Every dental practice today all over the world is implant centric today for the longevity of human lives and enhanced technology which makes it doctor and patient friendly. A majority of patients however require bone grafting procedures for enhanced patient outcomes. The procedures are different for every case and can be done in different ways. The assured success of these processes will decide whether the dentist will be able to ensure a predictable final outcome. With the excessive courses, materials and technology available, it is difficult to decide which the best procedure for a particular defect augmentation. This lecture will cover the core principles which every dentist must follow in vertical augmentation, horizontal augmentation. It will cover GBR, ridge split, ridge expansion, sinus lifts and block grafts, the use of membranes, PRF and closure. This is a check list manifesto which every implantologist must follow.
