

Global Conference on NURSING AND HEALTHCARE

March 27-28, 2019 | Amsterdam, Netherlands

Sureeporn Thanasilp et al., J Prim Care Gen Pract 2019, Volume 2

EFFECTS OF NURSING INTERVENTION BASED ON BASIC BUDDHIST PRINCIPLES AMONG PATIENTS WITH TERMINAL CANCER

Sureeporn Thanasilp, Noppamat Pudtong, Janya Chimluang, Ratchaneekorn Upasen, Wilailuck Tantitrakul and Lanchasak Akkayagorn
Chulalongkorn University, Thailand

Patients with terminal cancer can suffer from various symptoms, affecting their quality of lives as well as their caregivers' lives. As caregivers, they often spend a lot of time to take care the patients especially in terminal illness, it is essential for them to have ability to deal with their emotion and manage those common symptoms. The previous study found that caring behavior of caregiver related to quality of patient's life.

BIOGRAPHY

Sureeporn Thanasilp is working as the faculty of nursing in Chulalongkorn university, Thailand. She has completed her bachelors in nursing and midwifery at Prince of Songkla University, Thailand in the year 1983. She did her masters in nursing at Medicine Mahidol University, Thailand. Her areas of expertise are symptom management & quality of life, palliative care and end of life care.

s_thanasilp@hotmail.com

Note: